

COLORADO GUBERNATORIAL CANDIDATES AND GUN STANCES

It's essential that our next governor (to be elected in November, 2018) supports retention of Colorado's universal background checks, ban on high capacity magazines, and relinquishment of weapons by domestic violence offenders.

Caucuses to select candidates will be held March 6, but already campaigns are seeking donations for their campaigns.

Colorado Ceasefire has summarized and expanded on a report by the Denver Post (October 16, 2017). We note candidate's fundraising efforts, which reflect their support in the community. Dollars noted are total contributions as of October 16, 2017 and generally are given in thousands of dollars (K).

Democratic Candidates

Of the nine Democrats who have filed to run for Governor, only two have taken votes on Gun Bills:

Michael Johnston - Denver

As a state senator in 2013, Johnston cosponsored the Universal Background Check bill and voted to support all five of the gun reform laws. Additionally, he spoke eloquently from the senate floor in support and defense of these. He has voted against permitless concealed carry and training teachers to be armed, and has indicated an interest in banning bumper stocks and assault weapons. Additionally, he opposes easing restrictions on silencers. Has raised $1254K, but it has been noted many donations are from out-of-state people who support his education reform efforts.

Jared Polis - Boulder

As a Congressman, Polis has a checkered record on the issue. To enumerate:

2017: Voted against 2 bills to allow mentally ill veterans and social security recipients to buy guns.

Co-sponsored a bipartisan bill to ban bump stocks and a bill to reinstate gun violence research, but he has not joined with his Democratic colleagues DeGette and Perlmutter on co-sponsoring a high capacity magazine ban (which had 89 co-sponsors as of 10/27/2017).

2016: Did not join with Democratic colleagues in co-sponsoring an Assault Weapons Ban, but did co-sponsor a ban on guns to terrorists.

Co-sponsored King-Thompson background check bill, also did in 2014.

2014: Most egregious to us was his vote to interfere with D.C. gun laws. In a note to Ceasefire regarding that vote, Polis stated "I have always run on being against gun registries and there is no chance that I will change my mind for the foreseeable future." On that same note, he indicated his support for universal background checks. Polis co-sponsored the Interstate Commerce Reform Act, which would have allowed gun dealers to sell any firearm to residents of any state.

Through a personal communication with a colleague, Polis indicated that the Denver Post did not include his answers to their survey in which he indicated he would not seek to overturn any of the 2013 gun laws, but stated there is always room for bipartisan improvement. Additional responses to the Denver Post survey: against guns in schools, against easing silencer regulations, and against permitless concealed carry. Polis's views have evolved from his 2013 statement regarding assault weapons that "banning weapons possessed by law-abiding people violates the Second Amendment." His staff indicates Polis is no longer averse to an assault weapons ban, but tempers his stance with concerns for the druthers of hunters and sportsmen. Although Polis has raised over $711K, all but $80K are from two donations from himself.

Other major Democratic Candidates

These three candidates have no recorded votes on gun bills, but they have all indicated they support the bills passed in 2013 (universal background checks and high capacity magazine ban), and bans on bump stocks and assault weapons. They oppose arming teachers, permitless concealed carry and making it easier to obtain silencers.

Noel Ginsburg--Denver

An entrepreneur and CEO of Intertech Plastics, Ginsburg has an intense interest in education and believes an important means of preventing gun violence is in services to kids at the front end. Ginsburg also suggests licensing for gun owners with a required safety course. Has raised $461K, of which $150K is his own donation.

Cary Kennedy--Denver

Served as Colorado State Treasurer and as Denver's Chief Financial Officer. She wants to raise awareness of keeping guns out of the hands of children. Kennedy grew up in with foster siblings who had been victims of violent crimes and had been incarcerated themselves. She believes we need to have a conversation about what services are available for people when they are concerned that someone they love might harm to themselves or others. Has raised $565K

Donna Lynne -- Denver

A former health care executive, Lynne is currently Lieutenant Governor and oversees a state program to connect primary care doctors with practitioners in mental health so that persons experiencing behavioral health problems don't slip through the cracks. Entered race late, but has raised $374K.

Also Running for the Democratic Nomination

Adam Garrity - Phippsburg

Posted on Facebook on October 6th "I will remove firearm restrictions ASAP." Has raised $0.

Moses Humes - White Ridge Even a newspaper was unable to locate him for comments. Has raised $0.

Michael Schroeder - Basalt Seems to be most concerned about the pot industry. Has raised $25K.

Erik Underwood - Boulder

A tech entrepreneur running as a Democrat. In 2016 he ran as a Republican for the U.S. Senate. At the state Republican convention, he spewed red meat comments: "They're not going to take your guns away if I'm in the United States Senate." (Note to Underwood: Despite the gun lobby rhetoric, The number of guns taken away from law abiding citizens due to the 2013 laws is ZERO.)

<http://www.coloradoindependent.com/166640/erik-underwood-colorado-governor> Has raised $0.

Republican Candidates

Major Republican Candidates

George Brauchler - Lakewood

District Attorney for the 18th Judicial District. Despite detailing the horrendous violence in the Aurora Theater shooting in his unsuccessful effort to convict the gunman of the death penalty, Brauchler is adamantly supportive of the NRA agenda. Brauchler strangely stated “Limiting magazine capacity wouldn’t have changed a single thing in that case.” The shooter used a 100-round drum magazine. Brauchler dismissed background checks because the Aurora shooter passed one, clearly overlooking the nearly 31,000 gun sales denied to prohibited buyers since the 2013 law was enacted. He supports arming teachers, permitless concealed carry, and easing silencer restrictions, and opposes banning bump stocks and assault weapons. Has raised $282K.

Victor Mitchell - Castle Rock

A millionaire businessman and former state lawmaker. Although he supports Universal Background Checks and would support a bump stock ban, he does not support the high capacity magazine ban, and he supports arming teachers, permitless concealed carry and making silencers more easily available. Mitchell opposes an assault weapons ban. He indicated that we need more people carrying firearms in more places and need to get rid of gun free zones in Colorado’s schools. Has raised $26K, but has pledge to donate $3 million of his money to his campaign.

Doug Robinson - Englewood

A former investment banker and nephew of Mitt Romney, Robinson did not complete the Denver Post’s survey, but indicates that we should keep universal background checks. He believes that Colorado should reconsider the high capacity magazine ban and is unsure on the bump stocks. He indicated that another way to address gun violence is in focusing on drug use and on family life. Has raised $283K.

Walker Stapleton - Greenwood Village

Currently Colorado State Treasurer, he cleverly stayed out of the race while holding fundraisers for a separate independent expenditure committee. Although he didn’t answer the Denver Post’s survey he indicated he would “absolutely sign” a repeal of Universal Background Checks. Just joined the race, so has raised only $8K.

Tom Tancredo - Lakewood

Former Congressman Tancredo just announced he is running for governor, perhaps buoyed by the encouragement he has received from Steve Bannon (former Trump White House adviser) to do so. In a recent poll he came out on top of the Republican field, with over 2.5 times the support of nearest Republican - Walker Stapleton. Tancredo ran for governor in 2010 and 2014, is strongly pro-gun rights and in a demonstration of his maturity flipped us off as we were working on the anti-recall campaign in 2013.

Also running for the Republican Nomination:

Stephen Barlock - Denver Realtor co-chair of Donald Trump’s campaign. Wants to tackle the “swamp” in state politics. Does not discuss gun issues on his website, only PERA. Has raised $4K.

Lew Gaiter – Livermore. Larimer County Commissioner Web page is silent on issue. Has raised $10K.

Greg Lopez - former mayor of Parker. Web page is silent on issue. Has raised $7K

Jim Rundberg - Moffatt His website is quite sparse, but under his name states “Republican, Pro-Life, Pro-2nd Amendment” raised $3K.

Third Party and Unaffiliated Candidates

There are 7 others running who are unaffiliated or from smaller parties. We were unable to find any information on their stances on gun policies.

Read the Denver Post article on candidates and the gun issue.

<http://www.denverpost.com/2017/10/22/colorado-gun-control-laws-governor-race-2018/>